Friends Like These

A lively book party for Anjelica Huston may have solved the ongoing mystery of the nature of Hollywood relationships. BY CARSON GRIFFITH

“PEOPLE THINK HOLLYWOOD FRIENDSHIPS don’t run deep,” said Irena Medavoy, who recently co-hosted a party with her husband, Orion Pictures co-founder Mike Medavoy, to celebrate Anjelica Huston’s memoir, A Story Lately Told. “But we always show up for each other; it’s just not always captured by a camera.” Huston herself echoed the sentiment in a speech to guests about her long-standing friendship with the Medavoy’s. (Mike was a close friend of Huston’s late husband, the sculptor Robert Graham, and the Medavoy’s are avid collectors of his work.)

gained further traction when Jack Nicholson, who was linked to Huston for 17 years, was spotted warmly chatting with her while double-fisting champagne and a bottle of Evian. Joni Mitchell was also there—"She held court outside for the smokers," Irena said—as were Jane Fonda and her dog Tulea, who hopped onto Helen Mirren's lap. Lauren Hutton seemed to be Instagramming Huston's toast from her perch on the couch.

But as Irena, ever the consummate hostess, pointed out, "There should always be one point of drama at any party." That came when Australian film director (and ex-girlfriend of Al Pacino) Lyndall Hobbs "crashed her Range Rover into someone else's car when she didn't put it into park at the valet stand," Irena said.

The celebration also drew Richard Perry, Taylor Hackford, Chris Dodd, Sherry Lansing, and Angella and David Nazarian (and was co-hosted by T&C). Guests were offered Irish- and English-inspired dishes as a nod to Huston's Anglo-Celtic upbringing, and Casamigos, Rande Gerber and George Clooney's tequila, was served at the bar. Not that anyone needed libations to enhance the mood. The evening went late into the night, with one of Irena's neighbors the last to depart. "Everyone thinks Jon Lovitz is so shy," Irena said. "But he was one of the last to leave!" ●

TEAM ST. BART'S

Recently the New York Post openly wondered if this tiny French Caribbean island had lost its luster, but the BRANT BROTHERS, their mom STEPHANIE SEYMOUR, LARRY GAGOSIAN, SAMANTHA and ABY ROSEN, and countless others would choose to disagree. Raise a rum punch with them at Maya's, or at least wave from the Sand bar at the Eden Rock hotel to show your support.

TEAM TULUM

It first gained a reputation as an eco-chic yoga haven, but the arrival of celebrities such as EVAN RACHEL WOOD, FRANCISCO COSTA, KATE BOSWORTH, ORLANDO BLOOM, and mother-daughter duo RUMER WILLIS and DEMI MOORE have given this Mexican town more glamour than grit. Test its laid-back reputation and buy Demi some mezcal at Coqui Coqui, or try to grab the space next to her at Amansala's bikini boot camp.
